Julie's Blog

Perfectionism, Grass is Always Greener Syndrome, and Being Neurodiverse; Perfectionism is often seen in the gifted and 2e profile. Grass is Always Greener Syndrome takes perfectionism and applies it to all parts of one's life; robbing the person of feeling satisfied, calm and happy. In the case of GIGS and parenting - the results can be detrimental to the child. Learn more about GIGS and how to tame it in Julie's blog this month.

VIDEO - Let's Talk 2e Tuesdays: Clinical Considerations

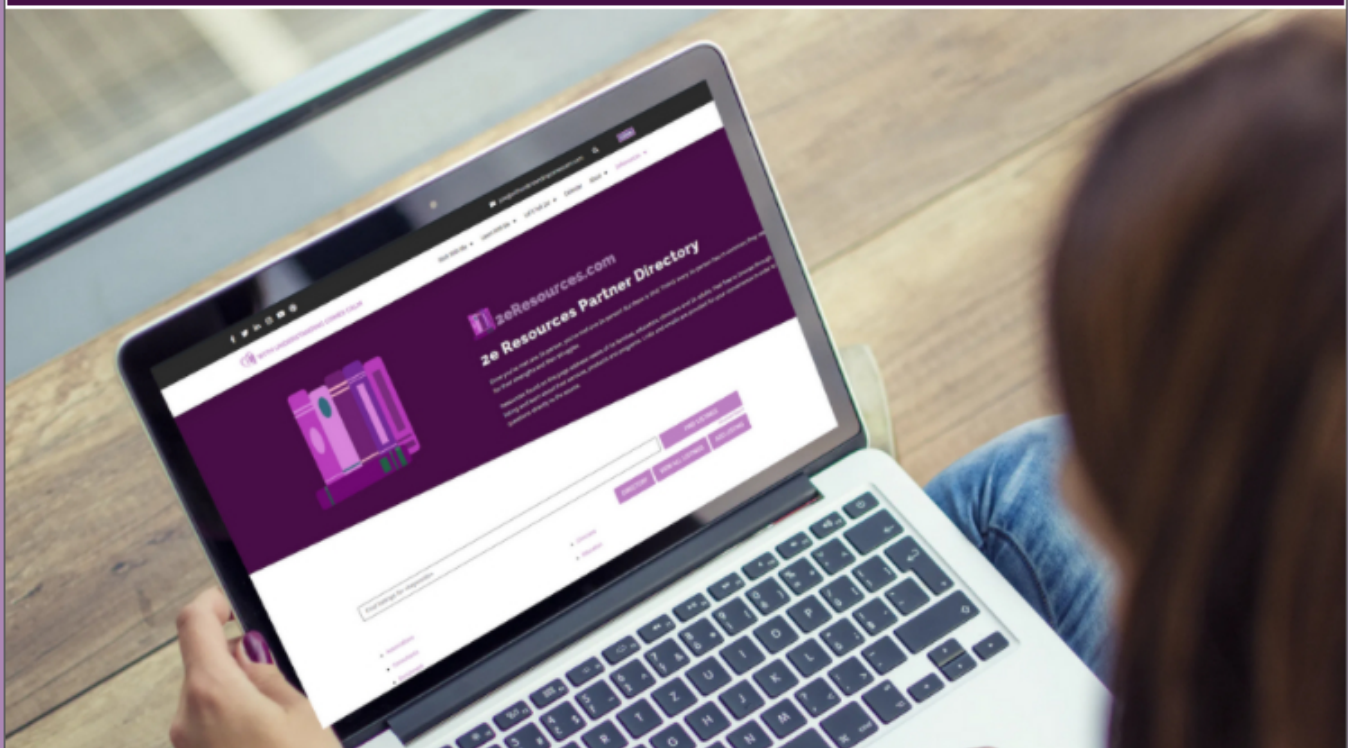

Last week's Let's Talk 2e Tuesday panel was filled to the brim with incredible insight, wisdom, and strategies regarding how neurodiversity manifests in the classroom. Dr. Jerome Schultz, Dr. Nicole Tetreault, and I had a fascinating and fun discussion answering teacher questions!

We know you're incredibly busy and may not have had a chance to attend, so we are sharing a recording of the discussion with you here! This recording will be online, on-demand indefinitely, so you can watch it at your leisure.
